

Reflective Supervision

For professionals providing reflective supervision

2 Day Course

Aimed at professionals who are providing or who wish to provide reflective supervision to other practitioners. This is a course designed to take the aspects and essence of the 3 theoretical models (ACEs and Toxic Stress, Neuroscience of Mental Health and Protect Relate Regulate Refect) which underpin TISCUK's practitioner training and apply this to the field of reflective supervision. We discuss in detail, what this means and what this doesn't mean on the course.

Primarily, this is about offering a creative and reflective space to practitioners to explore what is going on for them, in the work that they are doing with the clients with whom they work. Largely this is about emotional support and a space to reflect therapeutically about the interplay between client and practitioner, in order for the practitioner to be heard, seen and met, in a space away from the client group, so that they might best serve the client group as they move forward.

There are two routes for entry:

- TISCUK Practitioners in a senior role with below responsibilities.
- Educational Psychologist, Clinical Psychologist or counsellor/therapist etc. with previous supervision experience (SLT training advised but webinar provided).

The criteria for attending the 2 day Reflective Supervision workshop is:

- Delegates attending must have responsibilities for delivering Line Management/Supervision within their role.
- All delegates must have access to their own form of supervision/coaching/reflective space

The workshop is appropriate for delegates who wish to immerse themselves in a confidential, experiential online space that promotes a TISCUK model for Reflective Supervision.]
